Domestic Violence Facts

Domestic violence is a pattern of behaviors used by one partner to maintain power and control over another partner in an intimate relationship.

Many abusive partners may seem absolutely perfect in the early stages of a relationship. Possessive and controlling behaviors don't always appear overnight, but rather emerge and intensify as the relationship grows.

Domestic violence is not just physical; there are emotional, financial, sexual, digital, coercion, and other tactics utilized to maintain power and control.

Leaving is often the most dangerous time for a victim of abuse, because abuse is about power and control. When a victim leaves, they are taking control and threatening the abusive partner's power, which could cause the abusive partner to retaliate in very destructive ways.

Aside from the potential danger of leaving there are many reasons victims of domestic violence may stay in the relationship including, but not limited to:

fear; believing the abuse is normal; fear of having sexual orientation or gender outed; embarrassment or shame; love for their partner; cultural or religious reasons; language barriers or immigration status; lack of money or resources; or disability status.
